INTRODUCTION

Abandoning the courts' traditional role as protector of constitutional rights, the Majority has decided that it will not hear Voter-Intervenors' claims that the Pennsylvania State Senate Intergovernmental Operations Committee ("Committee") is violating their constitutional right to privacy. The Majority overlooks substantial case law holding that the Pennsylvania Constitution gives citizens the right to notice and an opportunity to be heard before the government obtains or releases their non-public personal information. The Majority's ruling and reasoning not only exposes millions of Pennsylvania voters to dissemination of their driver's license numbers and last four digits of their social security numbers, but also shuts the door to judicial review, the only mechanism available to protect their constitutional rights. These are substantial questions that deserve this Court's en banc review.

ORDER IN QUESTION

Applicants seek review of the Court's February 9, 2023 Order dismissing their Petition for Review, and accompanying Opinion.

POINTS OF LAW OVERLOOKED OR MISAPPREHENDED BY THE COURT

The Majority erred in several ways by refusing to exercise jurisdiction and hear Voter-Intervenors' claims (and the consolidated Petitions for Review). First, it overlooked applicable Pennsylvania law on constitutional privacy rights and severely restricted the judiciary's historical role to ensure that the exercise of legislative power does not violate constitutional rights; second, it misapprehended the present dispute as not "ripe" for decision because of a lack of "confrontation" and the fiction that no citizens' constitutional rights are "affected" when in fact millions of Pennsylvania voters' privacy rights are in imminent jeopardy (Slip op. at 20, 22); and third, it erred in denying judicial review of a legislative process (Slip op at 29-31).

The Majority overlooks that it is the courts' role to protect citizens from unconstitutional overreach from the legislative or executive branches. The Majority also overlooks that the Voter-Intervenors have no other remedy to protect their constitutional rights. By dismissing their Petition, the Majority effectively strips voters of their right to privacy vis-à-vis the legislature and abandons its important role as guardian of constitutional rights.

Black letter law on citizens’ constitutional privacy rights is clear. The government may not obtain or release information in which citizens have a constitutional right of privacy unless and until it satisfies the well-recognized balancing test—weighing the citizens’ privacy rights against the government’s interests. See, e.g., Easton Area Sch. Dist. v. Miller, 232 A.3d 716, 733 (Pa. 2020); City of Harrisburg v. Prince, 219 A.3d 602, 618 (Pa. 2019); Reese v. Pennsylvanians for Union Reform, 173 A.3d 1143, 1145-46 (Pa. 2017); Pennsylvania State Educ. Ass’n v. Commonwealth Dep’t of Cmty. & Econ. Dev., 148 A.3d 142 (Pa. 2016) (“PSEA”). In ignoring this line of cases, the Majority misapprehends their applicability to the issues in this case.

In concluding that this case is not ripe, the Majority misapplies and misapprehends prior precedents. For example, it relies on Camiel v. Select Committee on State Contract Practices of House of Representatives, 324 A.2d 862 (Pa. Cmwlth. 1974), to hold that this dispute is not ripe, yet completely overlooks the Camiel court’s recognition that its holding would have been different if citizens’ constitutional rights were clearly affected. Similarly, the Majority cites Commonwealth ex rel. Carcaci v. Brandamore, 327 A.2d 1 (Pa. 1974), as support for restricting the judiciary’s oversight role of a legislative subpoena, yet misapprehends that the Brandamore court specifically affirms the judicial role in guarding against “governmental encroachments on individual freedom and privacy.” 327 A. 2d at 4.

The Majority also misapprehends Annenberg v. Roberts, 2 A.2d 612 (Pa. 1938), unduly limiting that case so that it would have no precedential value or applicability to this case and ignoring the Supreme Court’s holding that legislative power is limited by constitutional protections. 2 A.2d at 618. The Majority also overlooked that the Committee here is seeking personally-identifying information of all 9 million Pennsylvania voters and the Annenberg court specifically condemned legislative intrusion on privacy. Id.

Furthermore, the Majority’s decision effectively overrules an earlier decision in this matter by an en banc panel of the Court, which concluded that the resolution of certain issues required further factual development (January 10, 2022 Per Curiam Opinion). Now, without any further factual development, the Majority resolves those same issues itself, essentially nullifying the en banc panel’s holding.

STATEMENT OF REASONS FOR GRANTING REARGUMENT

Apparently concerned about making the legislature “subordinate” to the judiciary, the Majority has abdicated its role as the protector of constitutional rights, leaving voters with no way to protect their constitutional right to privacy. It has overlooked substantial precedent about its role and the need to protect citizens’ rights, it has misapprehended the law it does cite—inappropriately limiting those cases to their facts and ignoring their holdings with respect to constitutional rights—and it essentially overrules an en banc panel’s determination that the factual record was insufficient to make the findings that the Majority now makes without any factual record.

“The judiciary’s paramount duty . . . lies with the solemn obligation to protect, safeguard and uphold those [constitutional] rights.” Commonwealth v. Koehler, 229 A.3d 915, 936 (Pa. 2020). See also Kroger Co. v. O’Hara Tp., 392 A.2d 266, 270 (Pa. 1978) (noting the courts’ “obligation to protect the constitutional rights of our citizens under the Pennsylvania constitution”); National Land & Inv. Co. v. Kohn, 215 A.2d 597, 607 (Pa. 1965) (“The time must never come when, because of frustration with concepts foreign to their legal training, courts abdicate their judicial responsibility to protect the constitutional rights of individual citizens.”); In re Prospect Crozer LLC, No. 1596 C.D. 2019 (Pa. Cmwlth. Sept. 28, 2022) (Leavitt, J.) (“This Court is required to examine the limits imposed by any constitutional provision, and if there is a violation, grant appropriate relief” (emphasis added)).

The right to privacy is “the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized [people].” Denoncourt v. Commonwealth State Ethics Comm’n, 470 A.2d 945, 949 (Pa. 1983) (quoting Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438, 478 (1928) (dissenting opinion of J. Brandeis)). The right to privacy under the Pennsylvania Constitution includes “the right of the individual to control access to, or the dissemination of, personal information about himself or herself.” PSEA, 148 A.3d at 150. In the face of a potential violation of privacy rights, courts must provide citizens notice and an opportunity to be heard. City of Harrisburg v. Prince, 219 A.3d 602, 618 (Pa. 2019). See also Easton Area Sch. Dist., 232 A.3d at 733 (Pa. 2020). And the Pennsylvania Supreme Court repeatedly has held that our Constitution requires courts to permit individuals to assert their constitutionally-protected privacy rights, and then balance those rights against the government’s demonstrated interests in the information, before the disclosure of such information. See, e.g., Easton Area Sch. Dist., 232 A.3d at 733 (“Before the government may release personal information, it must conduct a balancing test to determine whether the right of informational privacy outweighs the public’s interest in dissemination”); Reese v. Pennsylvanians for Union Reform, 173 A.3d 1143, 1145-46 (Pa. 2017) (“Before disclosing any section 614 information, however, the State Treasurer must perform the balancing test set forth in [PSEA]”).

The Majority does not address this line of cases, except to distinguish Reese as “inapposite” because it involved a right-to-know request rather than a legislative subpoena (Slip Op., p. 31 n.26). But these cases clearly stand for the proposition that individuals have a constitutional right to privacy and government officials (such as the Acting Secretary) cannot release such private information without affording individuals an opportunity to be heard. And the Majority’s attempted distinction is undercut by other cases applying the right to privacy to contexts outside the right-to-know law. Lunderstadt v. Pa House of Rep. Select Committee, 519 A.2d 408 (Pa. 1986) (plurality opinion); Denoncourt v. Commonwealth, 470 A.2d 945 (Pa. 1983); Commonwealth ex rel. Carcaci v. Brandamore, 327 A.2d 1 (Pa. 1974); Annenberg v. Roberts, 2 A.2d 612 (Pa. 1938). In fact, an en banc panel of this Court already concluded that the right to privacy applies to legislative investigations. Court’s January 10, 2022 Opinion, at 3 (“Broad as it is however, the legislature’s investigative role, like any other governmental activity, is subject to the limitations placed by the Constitution on governmental encroachments on individual freedom and privacy,” citing Carcaci). The Majority’s refusal to hear Voter-Intervenors’ claim, justified by its selective and erroneous application of precedent, requires re-argument before this Court.

More importantly, with the dismissal of their Petition for Review, Voter-Intervenors have no other remedy. The Majority simply proposes that voters can “request intervention” in any legislative proceeding where their information is at stake. Yet no established mechanism for any such intervention exists, the Majority cites to no such process, and the Committee opposed voters’ intervention both in these Consolidated Proceedings and the related proceeding at 95 MD 2022.

Further, the Committee has announced its position that voters have no privacy rights in the requested information and has maintained that the response to a subpoena is not a disclosure for which a balancing of interests is required. Brief of Respondents in Support Answer to Applications for Summary Relief, and Cross-Application for Summary Relief (filed October 22, 2021), at 1, 52-67, 117-120. The suggestion that voters can be heard by “requesting intervention” in the Committee’s proceedings, given these positions, is unreasonable and untenable.

Not only do Voter-Intervenors lack any mechanism to participate in any legislative proceeding relating to that demand, but they also lack any mechanism to preclude the Acting Secretary from voluntarily producing their personally-identifying information, or agreeing to some production that infringes upon their constitutional rights. Indeed, the Majority justifies its refusal to hear this dispute because the legislative subpoena is “capable of being resolved by negotiation and compromise or change of heart,” slip op. at 20, or “hashed out in the ‘hurly-burly, the give-and-take of the political process between the legislative and the executive,’” Id. (quoting Trump v. Mazars USA, LLP, ___ U.S. ___, ___, 140 S. Ct. 2019, 2029 (2020)). Voter-Intervenors requested relief against not only the Respondents, but also against the Acting Secretary, to prohibit her from disclosing their personally-identifying information in response to the Committee’s request. See Petition for Review (wherefore clause). If Voter-Intervenors do not have the right to present their argument to a court pre-disclosure, they would have no way to protect their constitutional right to privacy, whether as a result of proceedings within the legislature, by voluntary production by the Acting Secretary, or by agreement between the Acting Secretary and the Respondents. Indeed, Voter-Intervenors may not even know about such a disclosure until after it happens and after their information is placed at risk of identity theft or financial fraud. This is precisely why Voter-Intervenors require judicial intervention now, at this stage, to protect their constitutional privacy interests.

Rather than protecting voters' constitutional rights, the Majority seems concerned about unnecessarily interfering with the legislative process. Yet even the cases the Majority cites recognize the importance of protecting constitutional rights. For example, the Majority quotes Camiel v. Select Committee on State Contract Practices of House of Representatives, 324 A.2d 862 (Pa. Cmwlth. 1974), about separation of powers (on p. 19), but fails to include the first sentence of the quoted paragraph, which makes it clear that courts have a duty to act when constitutional rights at stake:

Preliminarily we have grave reservations concerning the jurisdiction of this Court to entertain a petition to quash a subpoena issued by a Select Committee of the House of Representatives of our General Assembly before a citizen's constitutional rights are actually affected.

324 A.2d at 865 (emphasis added). The Camiel decision goes on:

Courts should not interfere with the investigatory powers of the Legislature necessary to carry out its legislative function until some citizen's constitutional rights are affected and asserted as a reason for noncompliance or refusal to honor a legislative subpoena.

Id. at 866 (emphasis added). See also at 867-869 (highlighting many cases “rendering decisions on ripe cases presenting concrete issues concerning the effect of legislative action on citizens’ constitutional rights”). Because citizens’ constitutional rights are necessarily affected by the disclosure of private information pursuant to the subpoena served in this case (or at least, constitutional rights are alleged to be affected and an issue of fact exists), Camiel does not prevent review in this case.

The Majority cites Commonwealth ex rel. Carcaci v. Brandamore, 327 A.2d 1 (Pa. 1974), upholding a contempt conviction for failure to answer questions pursuant to a legislative subpoena, but characterizes the court’s analysis of constitutional limits on the legislature’s power as dicta (p. 11). The Majority then tries to limit the scope of the Carcaci court’s analysis by focusing solely on one of the cases cited by that court (p. 11-12). Directly contrary to the Majority’s conclusion, in Carcaci, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court concluded:

Broad as it is, however, the legislature’s investigative role, like any other governmental activity, is subject to the limitations placed by the constitution on governmental encroachments on individual freedom and privacy. . . . We approach this case with a full awareness of the threat that wide-ranging legislative investigations may pose to these protected interests . . .

327 A.2d at 4.

The Majority also limits the holding in Annenberg v. Roberts, 2 A.2d 612 (Pa. 1938), to circumstances where the legislature is investigating “personal affairs” or where the subpoenas “on their face” contemplate an unreasonable search and seizure. First, there is no rational justification for dismissing Annenberg when the subpoena recipient is holding someone else’s personal information under a position of trust; indeed, voters’ personally-identifying information would seem to qualify as “personal affairs.” Second, the Annenberg court struck down the subpoena before it as facially invalid because of the subpoenas’ intrusion into the private financial and business connections between the targets and certain companies. Nothing in that opinion, however, limits the holding to facially invalid subpoenas or prevents this court from exercising its jurisdiction. Citizens’ constitutional rights apply to all government actions, not just those that are deemed facially invalid; to hold otherwise would be to read the well-recognized balancing test out of existence and to allow savvy legislatures to perform an end run around the Constitution. Third, while the Annenberg court specifically referenced unreasonable searches and seizures, its holding was based more broadly on the right of personal privacy:

None of the rights of the individual citizen has been more eloquently depicted and defended in the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States than the right of personal privacy as against unlimited and unreasonable legislative or other governmental investigations. . .

2 A.2d at 618 (emphasis added). This same right to privacy has been found in Article I, Section 1, as the Majority recognizes (p. 4 n.6). And the Voter-Intervenors have alleged a right to privacy under both Sections 1 and 8. See Petition for Review, at ¶80-87.

Throughout its opinion, the Majority unnecessarily limits each precedential case to its facts and then deems them inapplicable. At the same time, other than general statements about the power of the legislature to investigate and to enforce its subpoenas, the Majority does not cite any cases that describe how constitutional claims should be addressed in the context of legislative subpoenas. Instead, the Majority concludes that constitutional claims need not be addressed at all because it “cannot assume that the Senate Committee will not be mindful of the informational privacy interests of registered voters” (p. 30). In other words, the Majority would abdicate the courts’ traditional role as the protector of constitutional rights.

The Court also should grant rehearing because the Majority effectively overruled a prior en banc decision. Although the Court requested briefing only on the issues of ripeness and jurisdiction, the Majority’s February 9, 2023, Opinion purports to make findings on some of the same questions that the en banc panel determined (in its January 10, 2022 opinion) needed further factual development. These holdings essentially strip voters of their constitutional right to privacy, create conflicts in the law, and lead to absurd results. For example, the Majority concludes that it need not review the subpoena at issue because it “does not inquire into the Acting Secretary’s private and personal affairs or in any way compromise her Fourth Amendment right,” (p. 30), severely restricting the circumstances in which constitutional rights may be protected. If such were the law, the en banc panel would have granted summary relief dismissing the Petitions last year. The Majority further concludes that the SURE system, rather than the Committee’s subpoena, has placed the voters’ personally-identifying information at risk (p. 31-32), and characterizes the decision in Applewhite v. Commonwealth as supporting the turnover of documents in this case (p. 8)—both matters that were thoroughly briefed and argued in the applications for summary relief. Moreover, the Majority’s characterization of Applewhite is belied by the evidence submitted in support of those cross-applications, which the Majority overlooked. Finally, the Majority appears to endorse the Committee’s “single entity” theory (p. 7 n.11), yet another issue that was part of the summary relief determination, and wrongly states that the Acting Secretary offered no authority contrary to that theory (she and the Voter-Intervenors did so in the summary relief briefing—where it was at issue—and the Committee did not offer any authority in support of its theory). Thus, the Majority made rulings that the en banc panel concluded it could not make on the present record. This is yet another reason why re-argument before an en banc panel is appropriate.

CONCLUSION

The Court should grant re-argument.

PER CURIAM

MEMORANDUM & ORDER

Before the Court for disposition are Applications for Summary Relief¹ filed by Petitioners, Senators Jay Costa, Anthony H. Williams, Vincent J. Hughes, Steven J. Santarsiero, and the Senate Democratic Caucus (collectively, Senate Democrats); the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Department of State, and the Acting Secretary of the Commonwealth, Veronica Degraffenreid (collectively, Acting Secretary); Arthur Haywood and Julie Haywood (collectively, the Haywoods); and the League of Women Voters of Pennsylvania, Common Cause Pennsylvania, Make the Road Pennsylvania and eight registered voters² (collectively, Intervenors), seeking an order to quash a subpoena duces tecum issued by the Pennsylvania State Senate Intergovernmental Operations Committee (Senate Committee) to Veronica Degraffenreid, Acting Secretary of the Commonwealth. Respondents, Senators Jake Corman and Cris Dush and the Senate Committee (collectively, Senate Republicans), filed a Cross-Application for Summary Relief requesting a judgment that the Acting Secretary has not presented a basis for quashing the subpoena duces tecum. All applications for summary relief are denied.

The Senate Committee's subpoena seeks the production of 17 categories of election-related materials in the possession of the Department of State, some of which include the names, addresses, dates of birth, driver's license numbers, and partial social security numbers of all registered voters in the Commonwealth.

² The eight registered voters are Roberta Winters, Nichita Sandru, Kathy Foster-Sandru, Robin Roberts, Kierstyn Zolfo, Michael Zolfo, Phyllis Hilley, and Ben Bowens.

The petitioning parties assert various reasons why the subpoena, or portions thereof, should be quashed. The Acting Secretary seeks the broadest relief, i.e., that the subpoena be quashed in its entirety because it was not issued to advance a legitimate legislative purpose, and an investigation to improve Pennsylvania's election laws falls outside the bounds of the Senate Committee's purview.

“The power to investigate is an essential corollary of the power to legislate.” Commonwealth ex rel. Carcaci v. Brandamore, 327 A.2d 1, 3 (Pa. 1974). “The scope of this power of inquiry extends to every proper subject of legislative action.” Id. A function of legislative committees is to make recommendations to the legislature for remedial legislation and other appropriate action. Lunderstadt v. Pennsylvania House of Representatives Select Committee, 519 A.2d 408, 410 (Pa. 1986) (plurality opinion). Our Supreme Court has stated:

The right to investigate in order to acquire factual knowledge concerning particular subjects which will, or may, aid the legislators in their efforts to determine if, or in what manner, they should exercise their powers, is an inherent right of a legislative body, ancillary to, but distinct from, such powers.

McGinley v. Scott, 164 A.2d 424, 429 (Pa. 1960). “Broad as it is, however, the legislature's investigative role, like any other governmental activity, is subject to the limitations placed by the Constitution on governmental encroachments on individual freedom and privacy.” Brandamore, 327 A.2d at 4.

The General Assembly's power of inquiry extends to every proper subject of legislative action, including potential amendments to the Pennsylvania Election Code.³ Accordingly, the Court cannot conclude that the Acting Secretary has established a clear legal right to quash the subpoena on the theory that it furthers no legitimate legislative purpose. To the extent she argues that the authority to investigate elections falls outside of the Senate Committee’s assigned subject matter, we decline the Acting Secretary’s invitation to interfere with internal Senate Rules and leave that matter to the legislature. See Brandamore, 327 A.2d at 4 (objections that committee’s investigation might overlap with the work of other committees and commissions were for the legislature not the court).

The Acting Secretary acknowledges that “some of the information that the [s]ubpoena demands is available to everyone on the Department[of State’s] website, or through a Right-to-Know [Law]^[4] request.” Acting Secretary’s Brief at 30. In addition, the Election Code specifically classifies many of the subpoenaed records as “open to public inspection,” including street lists (names and address of all registered electors), individual registered electors’ inquiries (name, address, date of birth, and voting history), and official voter registration applications. 25 Pa. C.S. §§1207, 1403-1404. Other laws may permit similar disclosure.⁵ If the public may access the information sought in the subpoena, there is no reason the records cannot be provided to the Senate Committee.

The Acting Secretary also raises questions of national security, maintaining that compliance with the subpoena could result in the release of “critical infrastructure information”⁶ about Pennsylvania’s election systems. Critical infrastructure information, she argues, is protected from disclosure by federal law, 6 U.S.C. §§671-674, and may only “be accessed in accordance with strict safeguarding and handling requirements” Acting Secretary’s Brief at 58. Senate Republicans rejoin that according to the Department of Homeland Security, the information requested by the subpoena can be provided by the Acting Secretary to other branches of Pennsylvania State government. Senate Republicans’ Brief at 97-98. They further argue that the Acting Secretary does not understand the difference between critical infrastructure information and protected critical infrastructure information, which are treated differently under the relevant federal statutes.

There is a substantial factual question surrounding the federal protection requirements and the capability of the Senate Committee’s contracted vendor, Envoy Sage, LLC, to protect the infrastructure information.⁷ This renders summary relief on this question inappropriate.

(A) actual, potential, or threatened interference with, attack on, compromise of, or incapacitation of critical infrastructure or protected systems by either physical or computer-based attack or other similar conduct (including the misuse of or unauthorized access to all types of communications and data transmission systems) that violates Federal, State, or local law, harms interstate commerce of the United States, or threatens public health or safety;

(B) the ability of any critical infrastructure or protected system to resist such interference, compromise, or incapacitation, including any planned or past assessment, projection, or estimate of the vulnerability of critical infrastructure or a protected system, including security testing, risk evaluation thereto, risk management planning, or risk audit; or

(C) any planned or past operational problem or solution regarding critical infrastructure or protected systems, including repair, recovery, reconstruction, insurance, or continuity, to the extent it is related to such interference, compromise, or incapacitation.

6 U.S.C. §671.

⁷ In their reply brief, Senate Republicans indicate that the Senate Committee recently contracted with Envoy Sage to aid the Committee in its use and review of the subpoenaed information. Senate Republicans’ Reply Brief at 9-10.

The petitioning parties also assert that the production of documents containing drivers' license numbers and partial social security numbers violates individual voters' rights to privacy guaranteed by Article I, Section 1 of the Pennsylvania Constitution.⁸ PA. CONST. art. I, §1. Some petitioners maintain the act of transferring these documents from the Department of State to the Senate Committee offends this constitutional right; others maintain the privacy right will be violated when the Senate Committee provides this information to its third-party vendor for analysis. The Senate Republicans assert that the Senate Committee, as a co-equal branch of government, is entitled to any and all information held by the Acting Secretary. The privacy interests of voters are not implicated where the government obtains this information, noting that the Department of State and the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation, two executive branch agencies, hold this information. They also assert that the Senate Committee can establish protocols to prevent this voter information from being shared with any unauthorized person.

The Court concludes that none of the parties have established a clear right to relief given the outstanding issues of material fact surrounding the issue of maintaining the privacy of voter information and infrastructure. For these reasons, the Court issues the following Order:

⁸ Article I, Section 1 sets forth the inherent rights of mankind: "All men are born equally free and independent, and have certain inherent and inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty, of acquiring, possessing and protecting property and reputation, and of pursuing their own happiness." PA. CONST. art. I, §1. Our Supreme Court has held that the citizens of this Commonwealth, pursuant to Article I, Section 1 of the Pennsylvania Constitution, have a right to informational privacy, namely the right of an individual to control access to, and dissemination of, personal information about himself or herself. Pennsylvania State Education Association v. Department of Community and Economic Development, 148 A.3d 142 (Pa. 2016).

OPINION
BY SENIOR JUDGE LEAVITT

FILED: February 9, 2023

Before the Court are the consolidated petitions for review filed by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Department of State, and the Acting Secretary of the Commonwealth, Leigh M. Chapman¹ (collectively, Acting Secretary); Senators Jay Costa, Anthony H. Williams, Vincent J. Hughes, and Steven J. Santarsiero, and the Senate Democratic Caucus (collectively, Democratic Senators); and Arthur Haywood and Julie Haywood (collectively, the Haywoods) (collectively, Petitioners).² Intervention was granted to the League of Women Voters of Pennsylvania, Common Cause Pennsylvania, Make the Road Pennsylvania, and eight registered voters (collectively, Voter Intervenors). Petitioners and Voter Intervenors challenge a subpoena duces tecum issued on September 15, 2021, by the Pennsylvania State Senate Intergovernmental Operations Committee (Senate Committee or Committee) to the Acting Secretary of the Commonwealth, to produce copies of certain election-related documents and deliver them to the General Counsel of the Senate Republican Caucus.³ Petitioners and Voter Intervenors seek to enjoin the subpoena. For the reasons that follow, we dismiss the petitions for review.

¹ At the time this matter was initiated, the Acting Secretary was Veronica Degraffenreid, and she was followed by Acting Secretary Leigh M. Chapman.

² The Haywoods filed their petition for review against the Acting Secretary. However, they essentially seek to restrain enforcement of the legislative subpoena.

³ After the 2023-2024 legislative session was convened, a praecipe to substitute certain senator parties was filed. No party has requested dismissal of the consolidated petitions for review on grounds of mootness.

Background

The Senate Committee's subpoena duces tecum seeks the production of 17 categories of election-related documents filed with and maintained by the Department of State. Included therein is a request for a list of all electors who voted in the November 2020 general election, by county, and the manner of their vote whether in person, by mail-in ballot, by absentee ballot, or by provisional ballot. The subpoena requests the same list, in the same format, for the May 2021 primary election. This requested information is contained in the Statewide Uniform Registry of Electors (SURE) system, 25 Pa. C.S. §1222⁴ (as identified in what is known as the Pennsylvania Voter Registration Act, 25 Pa. C.S. §§701-3302). The subpoena requests a list of voter registration changes made in the SURE system between May 31, 2020, and May 31, 2021, and copies of the Department of State's audits of the SURE system between 2018 and 2021. Finally, the subpoena requests a copy of the certified results for the two elections.

Petitioners and Voter Intervenors seek to enjoin the subpoena because they believe it does not have a valid legislative purpose. They assert that the Senate Committee's true purpose is to challenge the outcome of the 2020 presidential election, which is a matter conferred exclusively upon the judiciary and governed by the Election Code.⁵ Further, because the requested database includes voters' names, addresses, dates of birth, driver's license numbers, and the last four digits of their social security numbers, compliance with the subpoena may compromise the informational privacy rights of registered voters that are protected by the Pennsylvania Constitution.⁶

More specifically, the Acting Secretary's injunction petition asserts that the subpoena duces tecum is invalid and unenforceable because it:

- i. Was not issued for a legitimate legislative purpose;
- ii. Concerns matters outside the Committee's subject matter area;
- iii. Was issued without probable cause to seek information in which Pennsylvanians have a reasonable expectation of privacy;
- iv. Demands information protected by the deliberative process privilege; and
- v. Is overbroad.

Acting Secretary's Petition for Review, Prayer for Relief at 74. The Democratic Senators' injunction petition also asserts that the Senate Committee issued the subpoena to contest the 2020 general election or to do an election audit, either of which violates the separation of powers doctrine.⁷ Further, the requested voter ⁵ Section 1758 of the Election Code, 25 P.S. §3458, provides that an election outcome can be contested by filing a petition with the court having jurisdiction over the matter.

⁷ In regard to the concept of separation of powers, our Supreme Court recently stated:

In our Commonwealth, the roots of the separation of powers doctrine run deep. The delineation of the three branches of government, each with distinct and independent powers, has been inherent in the structure of Pennsylvania's government since its genesis - the constitutional convention of 1776. Indeed for most of our information is protected from public disclosure by the voter's constitutional right of informational privacy. Also asserting a right to informational privacy, the Haywoods seek to enjoin the Acting Secretary from disclosing their voter registration information contained in the SURE system. Voter Intervenors support the above-listed injunction petitions on the theory that the subpoena request is overbroad, is not for a valid legislative purpose, and implicates the informational privacy rights of the individual Voter Intervenors and the members of the association intervenors.

Petitioners and Voter Intervenors filed applications for summary relief requesting an immediate and permanent injunction.⁸ The Senate Committee responded with its own application for summary relief, asserting that the Pennsylvania Constitution permits the legislature to conduct an investigation that may aid legislators in determining whether, or in what manner, they should consider amendments to the Election Code. The Senate Committee asserted that the informational privacy rights of registered voters are not implicated when information in the possession of the executive branch is shared with another branch of the Commonwealth government, whether legislative or judicial.

In a memorandum opinion and order filed on January 10, 2022, this Court denied all the applications for summary relief because the parties did not establish a clear right to the relief they sought.⁹ Costa v. Corman (Pa. Cmwlth., No. 310 M.D. 2021, filed January 10, 2022); Pennsylvania Department of State v. Dush (Pa. Cmwlth., No. 322 M.D. 2021, filed January 10, 2022); Haywood v. Chapman (Pa. Cmwlth., No. 323 M.D. 2021, filed January 10, 2022) (cases consolidated).

Renner v. Court of Common Pleas of Lehigh County, 234 A.3d 411, 420 (Pa. 2020) (internal citations omitted).

Subsequent to the denial of summary relief, the Court directed the parties to address three questions: (1) whether the petitions for review were ripe for review; (2) whether the availability of an adequate remedy at law precludes the Court's exercise of equity jurisdiction over a challenge to a legislative subpoena; and (3) whether the General Assembly's constitutional enforcement power or the criminal contempt statute precludes the Court's exercise of equity jurisdiction. Court Order, 1/25/2022. Briefs were filed by all parties.

In her brief, the Acting Secretary argues that the matter is ripe for review because an actual controversy was created by the mere issuance of the subpoena duces tecum. The General Assembly's enforcement power exposes the Acting Secretary to arrest, detention, and criminal sanctions should this Court not exercise its equity jurisdiction. Democratic Senators, the Haywoods, and Voter Intervenors echo these arguments. Applying principles developed under the Right-to-Know Law,¹⁰ they argue that the Acting Secretary cannot disclose the voters' driver license numbers and last four digits of their social security numbers to a third party without balancing the private informational interest against the public interest in disclosure. See Pennsylvania State Education Association v. Commonwealth Department of Community and Economic Development, 148 A.3d 142, 158 (Pa.

⁹ However, the Court granted the cross-application for summary relief filed by the Senate Secretary-Parliamentarian Megan Martin. The Court agreed that the Democratic Senators did not state a claim against her, and, thus, she was dismissed as a named respondent.

2016) (PSEA) (holding that “[t]he right to informational privacy is guaranteed by [a]rticle I, [s]ection 1 of the Pennsylvania Constitution, and may not be violated unless outweighed by a public interest favoring disclosure”). Until the Senate Committee explains how the voter database information relates to potential legislation, the Acting Secretary cannot do this balancing of public and private interests, as she must before disclosing this information to a third party, i.e., the Senate Committee. Democratic Senators, the Haywoods, and Voter Intervenors observe that the Senate Committee’s enforcement of the subpoena may provide the Acting Secretary a proceeding in which to raise her constitutional objections to the subpoena; however, because they have not been issued a subpoena, they are not guaranteed the opportunity to challenge the subpoena.

The Senate Committee responds that the legislature is not a third party, as suggested by the Acting Secretary. The General Assembly is the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, as is the Secretary of the Commonwealth.¹¹ The subpoena duces

Voter Intervenors observe that in Chester Housing Authority v. Polaha, 173 A.3d 1240 (Pa. Cmwlth. 2017), informational privacy was implicated where a township requested a list of voucher recipients from the housing authority. This case is inapposite because it does not address two branches of one government. Rather, a housing authority and a township are separate entities, each created by the legislature in a separate enactment.

tecum was issued under the express authority of the Pennsylvania Constitution and, as such, bears no relation to a citizen request for information presented to the Department of State under authority of a statute, i.e., the Right-to-Know Law. The Senate Committee also questions the sincerity of the informational privacy claim, noting that one of the Voter Intervenors, the League of Women Voters, subpoenaed this very same voter registration information in its challenge to the voter identification law on grounds that the statute would suppress the exercise of the franchise. See Applewhite v. Commonwealth, 54 A.3d 1 (Pa. 2012). In that litigation, this Court directed the Department of State to provide this voter information in discovery so that the League of Women Voters' consultant could prepare an expert report for use in the litigation. Applewhite v. Commonwealth (Pa. Cmwlth., No. 330 M.D. 2012, filed April 29, 2013) (Simpson, J., single-judge order) (directing the Department of State to disclose the names, addresses, partial Social Security numbers, and driver's license and non-driver's identification numbers, of all voters in the SURE system, along with information from the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation's database that included date of birth, current address, county code, sex, and prior name and address).

Nevertheless, the Senate Committee asserts that this Court need not address the merits of the constitutional arguments raised by Petitioners and Voter Intervenors at this juncture. There has been no "confrontation," which is required in order to have an actual controversy ripe for judicial review. When, and if, the Senate Committee takes action to enforce its subpoena in accordance with its constitutional enforcement power, the Acting Secretary then may raise any and all of her legal and constitutional claims. The civil and criminal contempt statutes also provide legal remedies that preclude this Court from exercising equity jurisdiction.

On September 12, 2022, Petitioners, Voter Intervenors, and the Senate Committee presented oral argument on the questions raised by this Court’s January 25, 2022, order. Oral argument was heard seriatim with Pennsylvania Senate Intergovernmental Operations Committee v. Pennsylvania Department of State, __ A.3d __ (Pa. Cmwlth., No. 95 M.D. 2022, filed February 9, 2023).

Legislative Subpoena Power

We begin with a review of the principles that govern a legislative subpoena. This includes a review of the circumstances where the judiciary has become involved in the enforcement of a legislative subpoena.

“The legislative power of this Commonwealth shall be vested in a General Assembly, which shall consist of a Senate and a House of Representatives.” PA. CONST. art. II, §1. “Each House shall have power to determine the rules of its proceedings and . . . to enforce obedience to its process . . . and shall have all other powers necessary for the Legislature of a free State.” Id. §11.¹²

Among the powers “necessary for the Legislature” is the power to conduct investigations. PA. CONST. art. II, §11. Our Supreme Court has explained that the legislature’s “power to investigate is an essential corollary of the power to legislate” and that “[t]he scope of this power of inquiry extends to every proper

¹² It reads, in its entirety:

Each House shall have power to determine the rules of its proceedings and punish its members or other persons for contempt or disorderly behavior in its presence, to enforce obedience to its process, to protect its members against violence or offers of bribes or private solicitation, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, to expel a member, but not a second time for the same cause, and shall have all other powers necessary for the Legislature of a free State. A member expelled for corruption shall not thereafter be eligible to either House, and punishment for contempt or disorderly behavior shall not bar an indictment for the same offense.

subject of legislative action.” Commonwealth ex rel. Carcaci v. Brandamore, 327 A.2d 1, 3 (Pa. 1974) (Brandamore). “It is well established that a function of legislative committees is to find facts and to make recommendations to the legislature for remedial legislation and other appropriate action.” Lunderstadt v. Pennsylvania House of Representatives Select Committee, 519 A.2d 408, 410 (Pa. 1986) (plurality opinion). As our Supreme Court has explained:

The right to investigate in order to acquire factual knowledge concerning particular subjects which will, or may, aid the legislators in their efforts to determine if, or in what manner, they should exercise their powers, is an inherent right of a legislative body, ancillary to, but distinct from, such powers.

McGinley v. Scott, 164 A.2d 424, 429 (Pa. 1960). Nevertheless, there are limits to the legislature’s investigations, lest the legislature impermissibly encroach upon a citizen’s individual freedoms.

In Brandamore, 327 A.2d 1, our Supreme Court considered the appeal of Angelo J. Carcaci, a lieutenant in the Pennsylvania State Police who refused to answer questions put to him by a special committee of the House of Representatives investigating law enforcement agencies in the Commonwealth. The Supreme Court upheld Carcaci’s conviction for contempt and his commitment until expiration of the legislative session unless “he should sooner purge himself by testifying before the committee.” Id. at 2. Accordingly, it affirmed the dismissal of Carcaci’s petition for a writ of habeas corpus. Finally, the Court rejected Carcaci’s claim that the subpoena lacked a legislative purpose. After examining the House resolution authorizing the investigation, the Supreme Court concluded that “[l]aw enforcement and the administration of justice are public functions” and “proper subjects for legislative action.” Id. at 4. It also rejected Carcaci’s challenge to his conviction for contempt of the House of Representatives, concluding that it fully comported with due process.

In obiter dictum, the Supreme Court acknowledged that the legislature's broad investigatory powers are subject to "limitations placed by the Constitution on governmental encroachments on individual freedom and privacy." Brandamore, 327 A.2d at 4. With regard to that limitation, the Supreme Court explained that there must be a "balance between the protection of the rights of the individual and the avoiding of unnecessary restraint upon the State in the performance of its legitimate governmental purposes." Id. (quoting In re Pennsylvania Crime Commission, 309 A.2d 401, 407 (Pa. 1973)).

For this balancing test, our Supreme Court drew upon the United States Supreme Court's holding in Barenblatt v. United States, 360 U.S. 109 (1959), which reviewed Barenblatt's contempt conviction for refusing to answer questions about his participation in Communist Party activities. The United States Supreme Court acknowledged that where "First Amendment rights are asserted to bar governmental interrogation, resolution of the issue always involves a balancing by the courts of the competing private and public interests at stake in the particular circumstances shown." Id. at 126. The United States Supreme Court concluded that because the investigation related to a valid legislative purpose, the witness could be required to disclose his political and private relationships. It rejected Barenblatt's contention that "the true objective of the [c]ommittee" was "exposure," not legislation, explaining that "the [j]udiciary lacks authority to intervene on the basis of the motives which spurred the exercise of the power." Id. at 132.¹³ The remedy for "a wrong motive or purpose” lies “not in the abuse by the judicial authority of its functions, but in the people[.]” Id. at 132-33. The United States Supreme Court upheld Barenblatt’s conviction for contempt of Congress.

To be sure, a subpoena can be restrained where it seeks to “investigate the personal affairs” of the subpoena’s recipient without advancing a legislative purpose. Annenberg v. Roberts, 2 A.2d 612, 617 (Pa. 1938). In Annenberg, the subpoena in question was found to effect a warrantless search and seizure in violation of the Fourth Amendment.¹⁴ As such, the commission had unlawfully set itself up “as a court or grand jury.” Id.

The controversy had its origins in the governor’s convening of a special session of the General Assembly to consider “[m]aking illegal the use of devices or methods of transmission of information or advices in furtherance of gambling.” Id. at 614. The special session enacted the Act of October 11, 1938, P.L. 77, No. 27 (Act 27), which set up a six-person commission to investigate and make recommendations for improvements in the criminal gambling laws. The statute gave the commission the power to issue subpoenas and provided for penalties as “provided by the laws of this Commonwealth in such cases,” without specifying those laws. Annenberg, 2 A.2d at 615.

United States Department of Treasury, 45 F.4th 324, 333 (D.C. 2022) (Committee on Ways and Means) (“The mere fact that individual members of Congress may have political motivations as well as legislative ones is of no moment.”) the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

U.S. CONST. amend. IV.

The plaintiff, John Annenberg, filed a bill of equity in the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County to challenge the constitutionality of Act 27 and to restrain the subpoena directing him to produce

“all records, including contracts, stock certificates, agreements of trust, agreements of partnership, ledgers, journals, check-books, cancelled checks, bank deposit books, pass books, accounts, evidence of ownership, and memoranda, including letters, telegrams, messages and memoranda received from, and copies of letters, telegrams, messages and memoranda sent to” thirty-eight named individuals, “showing [his] connection with or interest in, either directly or indirectly, any or all companies, holding companies, corporations, partnerships or associations, directly or indirectly, engaged in or having to do with the dissemination of sporting news in all forms and by any means, including horse racing results distributed in the State of Pennsylvania or elsewhere in the United States [or] Canada, newspapers, racing sheets, dope sheets, form sheets, racing records and statistics, and particularly with respect to the following corporations or companies,” naming fifty-two corporations.

Annenberg, 2 A.2d at 617 (quoting subpoena) (emphasis added). Annenberg argued that the commission’s investigation into his personal financial affairs could be done only pursuant to a court-approved search warrant, after a showing of probable cause, or by a grand jury. Our Supreme Court agreed:

It would seem scarcely necessary to marshal authorities to establish, as a proposition of constitutional law, that a witness cannot be compelled, under the guise of a legislative study of conditions bearing upon proposed legislation, to reveal his private and personal affairs, except to the extent to which such disclosure is reasonably required for the general purpose of the inquiry. To compel an individual to produce evidence, under penalties if he refuses, is in effect a search and seizure, and, unless confined to proper limits, violates his constitutional right to immunity in that regard.

Id. (emphasis added).

The Supreme Court rejected Annenberg's various challenges to the constitutionality of Act 27. However, it held that the subpoena's demands for production of documents violated Annenberg's rights under the United States and Pennsylvania Constitutions. Annenberg, 2 A.2d at 619. Citing precedent from other state appellate courts and the United States Supreme Court, our Supreme Court explained that individuals are entitled to protection "in the enjoyment of life, liberty and property and from inquisitions into private affairs." Id. at 618 (quoting Attorney General v. Brissenden, 171 N.E. 82, 86 (Mass. 1930)) (emphasis added). The information requested of Annenberg was found irrelevant to the "matters properly being inquired into by the commission." Annenberg, 2 A.2d at 618. Instead, the court found that "[t]he subpoenas show on their face that they contemplate an unreasonable search and seizure." Id. (emphasis added).¹⁵ Because the subpoena duces tecum sought to do the work of a grand jury, it lacked a valid legislative purpose. Id.

Annenberg concerned a subpoena authorized by statute. However, in Lunderstadt, 519 A.2d at 413, our Supreme Court applied the Annenberg principles to a legislative subpoena issued under authority of the Pennsylvania Constitution because of the importance of "an individual's interest in maintaining privacy, under the Fourth Amendment and under article I, section 8 of the Pennsylvania Constitution[.]”¹⁶ The Supreme Court warned:

¹⁵ In Commonwealth v. Costello, 21 Pa. D. 232 (1912), the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia County dismissed the criminal indictment against an individual who refused to testify before a Senate committee. "Although the action of the Senate must be presumed to have had a legitimate object, if it is capable of being so construed, and the court has no right to assume that the contrary was intended, . . . its resolution, in our opinion, bears on its face plain indications that when it was adopted the Senate had no proper legislative purpose in view." Id. at 234-35 (citation omitted). The court concluded that the Senate had established itself as an extraordinary tribunal to exercise a judicial function. Further, the committee could not act after the legislature had adjourned sine die. Id. at 237.

[T]hat legislative investigations may, through inquisitions into private affairs, assume a character that is of questionable relevance to legitimate legislative purposes Indeed, in their proper realm, legislative committees are not to set themselves up as courts or as grand juries rather than as entities intended to investigate and report on conditions for the information of members of the legislature.

Lunderstadt, 519 A.2d at 413 (emphasis added). Where the legislature intrudes on “one’s private affairs,” a subpoena cannot issue “except upon a showing of probable cause that the particular records sought contain evidence of civil or criminal wrongdoing.” Id. at 414-15. The Supreme Court reversed this Court’s refusal to quash the subpoena to Carl Lunderstadt, a consultant for the Capitol addition project, to produce five years of his checking account and personal financial records and those of his family members. The concurring opinion of Justice Hutchinson would have quashed the subpoena on another ground:

This resolution does not contain even a hint that the investigation seeks to determine whether and what new law is needed to correct abuses in state construction contracts. The function of this investigating committee is limited to checking compliance with existing law. That function is reserved to prosecutors, police and grand juries.

Id. at 416 (Hutchinson, J., concurring) (emphasis added).

¹⁶ Article I, section 8 of the Pennsylvania Constitution provides that “the people shall be secure in their persons, houses, papers and possessions from unreasonable searches and seizures, and no warrant to search any place or to seize any person or things shall issue without describing them as nearly as may be, not, without probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation subscribed to by the affiant.” PA. CONST. art. I, §8.

In sum, neither a legislative committee nor a commission established by statute may set itself up as a grand jury or assume the function of a prosecutor. Annenberg, 2 A.2d at 617. Any “inquisition” into private affairs will be presumed to have a “questionable” legislative purpose. Lunderstadt, 519 A.2d at 413.

With these principles in mind, we turn to the question of whether the Court should exercise its equity jurisdiction to intervene in the Senate Committee’s subpoena for documents held by the Department of State at this juncture.

Analysis

The first question raised by this Court’s order of January 25, 2022, was whether the legislative subpoena is ripe for this Court’s review.

“Ripeness has been defined as the presence of an actual controversy; it requires a court to evaluate the fitness of the issues for judicial determination, as well as the hardship to the parties of withholding court consideration.” Borough of Centralia v. Commonwealth, 658 A.2d 840, 842 (Pa. Cmwlth. 1995). “Court rulings applying the ripeness doctrine are premised on policies of sound jurisprudence; courts should not give answers to academic questions, render advisory opinions, or make decisions based on assertions of hypothetical events that might occur in the future.” Philips Brothers Electrical Contractors, Inc. v. Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission, 960 A.2d 941, 945 (Pa. Cmwlth. 2008).¹⁷ To determine whether a matter is ripe, the Supreme Court has instructed as follows:

The factors we consider under our “adequately developed” inquiry include: whether the claim involves uncertain and contingent events that may not occur as anticipated or at all; the amount of fact finding required to resolve the issue; and whether the parties to the action are sufficiently adverse.

Township of Derry v. Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry, 932 A.2d 56, 58 (Pa. 2007) (internal quotation omitted) (emphasis added).

In Department of Environmental Resources v. Marra, 594 A.2d 646 (Pa. 1991), a landowner sought to restrain enforcement of this Court’s injunction that required him to disclose the location of certain paint solvents and waste removed from his property, on grounds that the order violated his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.¹⁸ The Supreme Court held that the matter was not ripe for review, explaining as follows:

In the present case, the Commonwealth has not sought to enforce its injunction, the lower court has not yet had an opportunity to hear appellant’s Fifth Amendment claim, and appellant herein does not risk the imposition of greater sanctions by awaiting the enforcement proceeding. It is possible that such proceedings will never be initiated.

Id. at 648 (emphasis added).

In Camiel v. Select Committee on State Contract Practices of House of Representatives, 324 A.2d 862 (Pa. Cmwlth. 1974), this Court was presented with a request to quash a legislative subpoena on constitutional grounds. In an en banc decision, we held that the mere issuance of a legislative subpoena does not create a controversy that was ripe for review.

In Camiel, the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, by resolution, formed a select committee to examine, investigate and make a complete study for the purpose of informing the House of Representatives in the discharge of its constitutional legislative functions and duties of any and all matters pertaining to: (1) the administration, activities, methods of operations, use of appropriations, use of funds and expenditures thereof, policies, accomplishments and results, deficiencies or failures, eff(i)ciency and effectiveness of State agencies responsible for the purchasing, leasing, contracting, and disposal of Commonwealth supplies, properties and services; and (2) individuals, corporations, consultants, advisors, authorities and entities within or outside the Commonwealth, related to, involved in, or affecting the purchasing, leasing, construction and disposal of Commonwealth property, supplies and services[.]

Id. at 864. The select committee issued a subpoena duces tecum to the custodians of records for the Republican and Democratic county committees of 12 counties in the Commonwealth. The subpoena issued to Peter J. Camiel, the Chairman of the Democratic County Executive Committee of Philadelphia County, sought books, documents, accounts, records, indices, tapes, logs, ledgers, and any and all other data pertaining to: (a) all contributions received on or after January 1, 1966 through May 13, 1974, including but not limited to, any monies, goods, services, or any other thing or things of value by the Democratic County Executive Committee of Phila[delphia] County or any other committee, group, or person operating under the authority of the aforementioned committee; [and] (b) the name and address of each of said contributors. The date, amount, and method of payment (cash, check, money order, etc.)[.]

Id. at 864-65 (emphasis added). Camiel filed a petition for review to restrain the subpoena.

Camiel's petition asserted that the request was so broad and indefinite that it violated his constitutional rights. Quoting Barenblatt, 360 U.S. at 111-12, we acknowledged that "[b]road as it is, the power (to investigate) is not, however, without limitations . . . more particularly [] the relevant limitations in the Bill of Rights." Camiel, 324 A.2d at 868. We further acknowledged that "Camiel has raised real issues which may some day have to be decided by the courts[;]" however, we concluded "that this case does not yet present a justiciable issue and therefore is not ripe for a decision on the merits." Id. at 865. Accordingly, we dismissed the petition for review.

In so holding, we began with separation of powers, explaining as follows:

We view this point to be of a very serious nature. If there is any one principle of constitutional law which supports and protects our form of government, including all of our constitutional rights, it is the separation of powers among the three branches of government. Every crack in this foundation weakens the entire structure.

Camiel, 324 A.2d at 866. We distinguished a legislative subpoena from a subpoena issued by a "commission, i.e., a separate entity," which acts "under specific statutory authority." Id. By contrast, in Camiel:

We are asked here to interfere with the legislative process, and we believe we must question whether we have the jurisdiction and the power to interfere at this point in the proceedings.

Id. (emphasis added). The "point in the proceedings" considered in Camiel was the service of the legislative subpoena. However, notwithstanding the service of a "subpoena duces tecum upon Camiel, [] there has been no confrontation." Id. (emphasis added).

We reasoned that a citizen must be able to raise constitutional defenses at the “point in the proceedings when his or her constitutional rights are affected[.]” Id. at 870. However, “[c]ourts should not decide a citizen’s constitutional rights in a vacuum.” Id. This is because we do not know whether the Select Committee will force an issue, for that is certainly within its discretion. Absent a confrontation and a record made showing the factual posture of the matter, it is our position that it is improper for this Court to dispose of all the potential constitutional issues which might be raised[.]

Id. at 866 (emphasis added). In short, this Court will not decide issues raised by a legislative subpoena that are capable of being resolved by negotiation and compromise or change of heart.

In Trump v. Mazars USA, LLP, ___ U.S. ___, ___, 140 S. Ct. 2019, 2030 (2020), the United States Supreme Court observed that historically “congressional demands for the President’s information have been resolved by the political branches without involving this Court.” These disputes are “hashed out in the ‘hurly-burly, the give-and-take of the political process between the legislative and the executive.’” Id. at ___, 140 S. Ct. at 2029. (citation omitted). For example, when a House subcommittee of the Congress subpoenaed documents from the Department of the Interior, President Ronald Reagan directed these documents to be withheld because they involved confidential presidential communications with subordinates. After the subcommittee voted to hold the Secretary of the Interior in contempt, “an innovative compromise soon followed.” Id. at ___, 140 S. Ct. at 2030. It is this “tradition of negotiation and compromise without the involvement of [the] court,” id., that largely informed our Court’s decision in Camiel, 324 A.2d at 866.

In dismissing Camiel’s petition, our Court acknowledged the holding in Annenberg, 2 A.2d at 618, noting that “a court sitting in equity may restrain public officers to protect a citizen’s constitutional rights after service of a subpoena and before a confrontation[.]” Camiel, 324 A.2d at 866 (emphasis added). However, we found Annenberg distinguishable. First, Annenberg involved a subpoena issued by a “commission, i.e., a separate entity,” not by the legislature. Camiel, 324 A.2d at 866. Second, Annenberg raised a search and seizure of a citizen’s private financial records, which was not raised in Camiel.

Federal case law also favors judicial restraint when faced with a challenge to a Congressional subpoena before confrontation. In In re Motions to Quash Subpoenas and Vacate Service, 146 F. Supp. 792 (W.D. Pa. 1956), a subpoena duces tecum was issued to Bessie Steinberg and Allan McNeil to testify about their activities to end sedition laws. They filed a motion to quash the subpoenas, and the District Court denied relief, despite the contention that the subpoenas violated their right of free speech and association.¹⁹ In denying the requested relief, the District Court stated:

We would be naive indeed if we did not recognize the difference of opinion regarding the subversive investigations of the last few years. That Congress has the duty to consider remedial legislation in order to best effectuate our defenses against subversion is only to state the obvious. That Congress and the courts should be ever vigilant to protect our individual rights is no less clear.

Here the petitioners are asking for protection against some danger as yet unknown. They claim a constitutional impairment not now clear. They presume a limitation of their constitutional privileges not yet threatened. For us to presume that the House of Representatives, the body most susceptible to the will of the people, will be less sensitive to the constitutional rights of the citizen than will be this Court would authorize a presumption I am not prepared to accept. This would not be exercising a judicial prerogative or a judicial restraint, but would in truth be judicial arrogance[.]

Id. at 795 (emphasis added). The District Court concluded that this request for relief was premature.

We conclude that, as in Camiel, this matter is not ripe for this Court’s review because there has been no confrontation. Likewise, the Annenberg circumstances do not pertain because that case concerned a subpoena issued under authority of statute and, thus, did not implicate “interference” with “legislative process.” Camiel, 324 A.2d at 866.²⁰ The Senate Committee has not taken any steps to enforce its subpoena duces tecum under article II, section 11 of the Pennsylvania Constitution or to hold the Acting Secretary in contempt. See Marra, 594 A.2d at 648. As the United States District Court aptly observed in In re Motions to Quash Subpoenas and Vacate Service, 146 F. Supp. at 795, “the petitioners are asking for protection against some danger as yet unknown.”

II.

Relying principally on Annenberg, 2 A.2d 612, the Acting Secretary asserts that this Court should exercise its jurisdiction in equity to restrain the Senate Committee’s subpoena duces tecum. Democratic Senators, the Haywoods, and Voter Intervenors agree, noting also that they have no other vehicle for advancing their informational privacy claims. The Senate Committee rejoins that the existence of a remedy at law precludes equity jurisdiction. Further, the “manner in which a legislative body exercises its inherent power to vindicate its authority and processes must satisfy the requirements of procedural due process.” Brandamore, 327 A.2d at 5. In short, the existence of a legislative process for the enforcement of the Senate Committee’s enforcement of its subpoena precludes this Court’s exercise of equity jurisdiction.²¹

There is a difference between subject matter jurisdiction and equity jurisdiction, as this Court has explained:

Jurisdiction is the power of a court to enter into an inquiry on a certain matter A careful distinction must be made between subject matter jurisdiction, which we have just defined, and equity jurisdiction, which describes the remedies available in equity

Hence, if there is an adequate non-statutory remedy at law, equity may withhold its remedies and the matter will be transferred to the law side[.]

Lashe v. Northern York County School District, 417 A.2d 260, 262 (Pa. Cmwlth. 1980) (citations omitted) (emphasis added). Equity is discretionary with the court and should be exercised only “where the facts clearly establish the plaintiff’s right thereto; where no adequate remedy at law exists; and where the chancellor believes that justice requires it.” Payne v. Clark, 187 A.2d 769, 771 (Pa. 1963) (emphasis added). “In other words, such a decree is of grace and not of right.” Id. (emphasis added).

In Brown v. Brancato, 184 A. 89, 91 (Pa. 1936), our Supreme Court held that there was “no doubt of the jurisdiction in equity to entertain the bill” brought by the directors of charitable trusts in the City of Philadelphia to challenge a proposed investigation by a committee of the House of Representatives. The Court explained that plaintiffs aver that defendants propose, by subpoena duces tecum to require production of the records, books, accounts, and other documents of plaintiff directors, to the general disorganization of their trust administration. Various prayers for restraint were made. The order dismissing the bill, made by the learned court below, cannot be sustained.

Id. (emphasis added). There were two reasons for the Supreme Court’s decision to grant relief in equity to the directors of the Philadelphia charitable trusts.

First, the subject of the bill in equity was charitable trusts. The Supreme Court explained that “[f]rom the earliest days chancery has exercised jurisdiction over charitable trusts Chancery powers over trusts were exercised in this [C]ommonwealth ‘as part of our own common law’ prior to the [Act of June 16, 1836,] P.L. 784[, repealed by the Act of April 28, 1978, P.L. 202].” Brown, 184 A. at 91 (citations omitted). The directors of the Philadelphia charitable trusts had the fiduciary responsibility to preserve trust property with a value of $93 million. The records and accounts sought to be delivered to the House Committee would create “general disorganization of their trust administration.” Id. The Supreme Court held that the directors were “not to be molested” in the exercise of their fiduciary responsibilities. Id. at 92.

Second, the House Committee’s power to act ended when the legislature adjourned sine die on June 21, 1935. The legislative action that triggered the bill in equity occurred after that date. The Supreme Court observed that it was doubtful that the House Committee could act under a resolution that was never submitted to the Senate. But even if it could, “after the adjournment, the power of the House complained of in this suit was done once and for all.” Brown, 184 A. at 93. For that reason, the Supreme Court held that the House Committee was “without lawful authority in the premises.” Id. at 92. The Supreme Court remitted the matter to the trial court with instructions to issue the injunction.

The Acting Secretary argues that because the Senate Committee has “the power to issue a warrant for the [Acting] Secretary’s arrest and detention in Dauphin County prison,” this Court must exercise equity jurisdiction. Acting Secretary Brief at 15-16. She argues that “a party need not wait to be subject to contempt proceedings before seeking judicial review.” Id. at 15, 17. Further, the Senate Committee has refused to narrow or withdraw its subpoena but, rather, has noted its authority to enforce a subpoena “without recourse to the judiciary.” Id. at 12. Stated otherwise, the Acting Secretary believes that the Committee’s possible enforcement of the subpoena warrants judicial intervention in equity and in advance of confrontation. We are not persuaded.

The Pennsylvania Constitution vests the legislature with the power to enforce its subpoenas. PA. CONST. art. II, §11. The mere existence of this constitutional enforcement power does not warrant judicial intervention. Rather, separation of powers requires that the “legislative process” be respected by the judiciary. Camiel, 324 A.2d at 865.

Further, due process does not require that a “finding of contempt must be made in a judicial forum.” Brandamore, 327 A.2d at 4. To the contrary, [t]he power of the Houses of the General Assembly to vindicate their authority and processes by punishing acts of contempt committed in their presence is inherent in the legislative function.

Id. (emphasis added). In Brandamore, our Supreme Court concluded that the House of Representatives had properly followed the procedures in Section 1 of the Act of June 13, 1842, P.L. 491, 46 P.S. §61, in holding Carcaci in contempt. To be sure, “the manner in which a legislative body exercises its inherent power to vindicate its authority and processes must satisfy the requirements of procedural due process.” Brandamore, 327 A.2d at 5. The Supreme Court concluded Carcaci received the process he was due from the House of Representatives.

In short, in the event the Acting Secretary chooses not to produce the voter registration information and in the event the Senate Committee chooses to exercise its constitutional enforcement powers, the Acting Secretary will be able to raise constitutional arguments in a proceeding that must provide due process. Brandamore, 327 A.2d at 5. That proceeding could be brought under the legislature’s constitutional enforcement powers, in accordance with the contempt statutes. See 46 P.S. §61; 18 Pa. C.S. §5110.²²

The dissent argues that there is an “interbranch conflict” presented in this case that supports judicial intervention before confrontation. It believes that any legislative subpoena issued to an executive branch agency should be reviewed by the judiciary, using the principles announced in Mazars, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S. Ct. 2019.

Mazars involved four House subpoenas seeking personal financial information from President Donald J. Trump and his children and affiliated businesses, including his accounting firm, Mazars USA, LLP. The United States Supreme Court concluded that this intrusion into the “personal affairs” of a sitting ²² “A person is guilty of a misdemeanor of the third degree if he is disorderly or contemptuous in the presence of either branch of the General Assembly, or if he neglects or refuses to appear in the presence of either of such branches after having been duly served with a subpoena to so appear.” 18 Pa. C.S. §5110.

President required limits. Cf. Annenberg, 2 A.2d 612; Lunderstadt, 519 A.2d 408. Under these limits, courts must do a careful assessment of (1) whether the subpoena’s “legislative purpose warrants the significant step of involving the President and his papers;” (2) whether the subpoena is “no broader than necessary to support Congress’ legislative objective;” (3) whether the subpoena for the President’s information clearly “advances a valid legislative purpose;” and (4) the extent of “the burdens imposed on the President by a subpoena.” Mazars, ___ U.S. at ___, 140 S. Ct. at 2035-36. Mazars is inapposite.

First, “the Mazars test was created with a sitting President in mind.” Committee on Ways and Means, 45 F.4th at 335 (applying Mazars test to a request of committee chairman for tax returns of President Donald J. Trump submitted under authority of a Federal statute and authorizing the release of the tax returns to Congress). Mazars addressed the potential for an “unnecessary intrusion into the operation of the Office of the President,” Mazars, ___ U.S. at ___, 140 S. Ct. at 2036, caused by subpoenas seeking over a decade of personal financial information from a period of time that predated his presidency. It was the burden of production that created the “interbranch conflict,” which was particular to the President, who “is the only person who alone composes a branch of government.” Id. at ___, 140 S. Ct. at 2034 (emphasis added).

Second, Mazars acknowledged, throughout, that the courts “have a duty of care that we not needlessly disturb the compromises and working arrangements” of the two political branches. Id. at ___, 140 S. Ct. at 2031. The principle of separation of powers requires the courts to show the “respect due the coordinate branches of government.” Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 217 (1962). It was this same concern that led our Court in Camel to conclude that it should not become involved prematurely in the enforcement of a legislative subpoena.

Third, Mazars' four-part test does not fit the Senate Committee's subpoena. This subpoena does not seek personal financial information from the President (or even the Governor), let alone present a request so broad in scope that mere compliance interferes with "the operation of the Office of the President." Mazars, ___ U.S. at ___, 140 S. Ct. at 2036.²³ Only where such considerations pertain does Mazars require Congress to explain "why the President's information will advance its consideration of possible legislation." Id.

Here, unlike Mazars, we address a legislative subpoena issued to a state agency for government records, not a request of Pennsylvania's chief executive for his personal papers. Rather than apply Mazars' holding to the particular circumstance for which it was devised, the dissent would require judicial review and approval of every legislative subpoena issued to a state agency before the legislature can expect compliance with its subpoena. This turns separation of powers on its head by making the legislative process subordinate to the judiciary. This is contrary to "the respect due a coordinate branch of government." Baker, 369 U.S. at 217.

Each branch, including the judiciary, must take care not “to exceed the outer limits of its power.” I.N.S. v. Chudha, 462 U.S. 919, 951 (1983).²⁴

In Pennsylvania jurisprudence, the circumstances that have authorized judicial intervention in a legislative subpoena have been exceptional and rare. It must be apparent from the face of the subpoena, or the authorizing legislative resolution, that there is not “even a hint that the investigation” has a legislative purpose. Lunderstadt, 519 A.2d at 416 (Hutchinson, J., concurring). Judicial intervention may be appropriate where the legislative committee lacks any power to act because the legislature had adjourned before the committee acted. Brown, 184 A. at 92. Equity can be invoked to restrain legislative subpoenas that show “on their ²⁴ The dissent cites the Montana Supreme Court’s decision in McLaughlin v. Montana State Legislature, 493 P.3d 980 (Mont. 2021), for its summation of federal law on the role of the judiciary and interpretation of Mazars. Out-of-state decisions may be cited, at most, for their persuasive authority. Shedden v. Anadarko E&P Company, L.P., 88 A.3d 228, 233 n.3 (Pa. Super. 2014). However, McLaughlin is inapposite.

In McLaughlin, the Montana Supreme Court quashed legislative subpoenas demanding four months of all emails between the Court Administrator for the Montana Judicial Branch and state judges and justices, as well as the production of state-owned computers and telephones used to communicate with justices on legislation or other matters that could come before Montana courts for a decision. The Montana Supreme Court held that an in camera review was needed to “balance competing privacy and security interests” in advance of production. McLaughlin, 493 P.3d at 983. The concurring opinion observed that “separation of powers does not tolerate the control, interference or intimidation of one branch of government by another.” Id. at 997 (McKinnon, J., concurring). The concurrence argued that the subpoena was issued to investigate “purported judicial misconduct” and “expose violation by judges, if not the entire judicial branch of ethical codes, state law and state policy . . .” Id. at 1002. As such, the legislature’s investigation was “incongruous to Montana’s Constitution and the constitutionally created method for addressing the discipline and removal of judges for misconduct.” Id.

By contrast, here, no party asserts that an inference of intimidation can be drawn from the Senate Committee’s subpoena. Further, to make Pennsylvania’s legislative process subordinate to the judiciary is incongruous with separation of powers under our Constitution, as construed by our Supreme Court in Brandamore, 327 A.2d 1. See also Camiel, 324 A.2d at 866.

face that they contemplate an unreasonable search and seizure” in violation of the Fourth Amendment. Annenberg, 2 A.2d at 618. Unlike informational privacy, which can be waived by the government where that privacy interest is outweighed by the public interest in disclosure, PSEA, 148 A.3d at 158, the government can never waive a citizen’s immunity against an unlawful search and seizure. Only the citizen has that power. This is not a Fourth Amendment case, and neither Petitioners nor Voter Intervenors so claim.

This Court cannot assume that the Senate Committee will not be mindful of the informational privacy interests of registered voters:

For us to presume that the House of Representatives, the body most susceptible to the will of the people, will be less sensitive to the constitutional rights of the citizen than will be this Court would authorize a presumption I am not prepared to accept. This would not be exercising a judicial prerogative or a judicial restraint, but would in truth be judicial arrogance[.]

In re Motions to Quash Subpoenas and Vacate Service, 146 F. Supp. at 795 (emphasis added). The same may be said here.²⁵ To assume that the Pennsylvania Senate, a body more susceptible to the will of the people than our appellate courts, will have less sensitivity to the informational privacy interests of registered voters “would in truth be judicial arrogance.” Id.

The subpoena issued by the Senate Committee does not inquire into the Acting Secretary’s private and personal affairs or in any way compromise her Fourth Amendment right. The subpoena does not interfere with the Acting Secretary’s duties, as agency head, with respect to the Department’s administration of the SURE system because the Senate Committee seeks copies, not original documents. In

Brown, 184 A. at 91, by contrast, the House Committee sought the original accounting ledgers and records from the directors of the charitable trusts thereby creating “general disorganization of their trust administration.” Finally, the Acting Secretary does not contend that the Senate Committee issued its subpoena after the legislature had adjourned sine die, i.e., that it lacked “lawful authority in the premises.” Id. at 92.

Democratic Senators, the Haywoods, and Voter Intervenors assert that they lack a remedy to challenge the legislative subpoena.²⁶ However, the private parties may request intervention in whatever enforcement proceeding is undertaken by the Senate Committee, should the matter not be “hashed out in the hurly-burly, the give-and-take of the political process between the legislative and the executive.” Mazars, ___ U.S. at ___, 140 S.Ct. at 2029. Democratic Senators will participate in that “hurly-burly” process and in the enforcement proceeding should one ever take place.

More to the point, it is the SURE system that has created the risk of exposure of the voter registration information that they seek to protect. 25 Pa. C.S. §1222(c)(5) (permitting “each commission and the department to have instant access to a commission’s registration records maintained in the system”). Further, “[r]ecords of a registration commission” may “be inspected during ordinary business hours[.]” 25 Pa. C.S. §1207(a)(1)-(b). Likewise, county election commissions shall prepare street lists for “all registered electors” in each election district for both political bodies and candidates. 25 Pa. C.S. §1403(a)-(c). It is the SURE system that exposes Democratic Senators, the Haywoods, and Voter Intervenors to disclosure of their voter registration information.²⁷ The SURE system can be accessed by any number of county and state employees, as well as the third-party private consultants engaged by the Department of State and by county commissions that from time to time use that database of voter information.²⁸ Equity is the vehicle for challenging the constitutionality of a statute that does not sufficiently protect informational privacy. See, e.g., Lynch v. Owen J. Roberts School District, 244 A.2d 1, 3 (Pa. 1968); Annenberg, 2 A.2d 617 (challenging constitutionality of Act 27 that created the commission to study gambling). However, Democratic Senators, the Haywoods, and Voter Intervenors do not challenge the constitutionality of any disclosure provision in the Election Code.

The Acting Secretary has been served in her official capacity as custodian of government records within the Department of State, which is a creature of the legislature. See Section 801 of The Administrative Code of 1929, Act of April 9, 1929, P.L. 177, as amended, 71 P.S. § 271. The Department has been established to serve as a repository of documents, from corporate charters to professional licenses as well as election-related materials, which are the subject of the subpoena. See also Section 802 of The Administrative Code of 1929, 71 P.S. §272 (establishing duty in Department of State to furnish records that a legislative committee may request from time to time).²⁹ A legislative subpoena for government records is not measured by Annenberg or Lunderstadt, which address requests for private financial documents.

The Senate Committee cannot set up itself as a court of law to set aside certified election results.³⁰ Commonwealth v. Costello, 21 Pa. D. 232, 237 (1912). Nor can the Senate Committee set up itself as a grand jury or prosecutor. Annenberg, 2 A.2d at 617. However, it cannot be inferred from the face of the Committee’s subpoena for election-related records that its investigation lacks even a “hint” of a legislative purpose but only a law enforcement purpose. Lunderstadt, 519 A.2d at 416 (Hutchinson, J., concurring). Indeed, the Committee’s subpoena “must be presumed to have had a legitimate object, if it is capable of being so construed, and the court has no right to assume that the contrary was intended[.]” Costello, 21 Pa. D. at 234-35. Finally, the Senate Committee did not issue the subpoena after the

²⁹ Section 802 of The Administrative Code of 1929 provides, in pertinent part, as follows:

The Department of State shall have the power and its duty shall be:

- (a) To permit any committee of either branch of the General Assembly to inspect and examine the books, papers, records, and accounts, filed in the department, and to furnish such copies or abstracts therefrom, as may from time to time be required;
- (b) To furnish to any person, upon request and the payment of such charges as may be required and fixed by law, certificates of matters of public record in the department, or certified copies of public papers or documents on file therein.

71 P.S. §272 (emphasis added).

legislature's adjournment, at a time when it was "without lawful authority in the premises." Brown, 184 A. at 92.

The exceptional circumstances that warrant the exercise of equity jurisdiction to restrain a legislative subpoena before confrontation are not present in this case. When, and if, the Senate Committee chooses to enforce the subpoena duces tecum, the Acting Secretary can be heard and her concerns addressed in a proceeding that must conform to due process. Brandamore, 327 A.2d at 5. If the Senate Committee's enforcement proceeding does not provide the Acting Secretary due process, that is the "point in the proceeding" at which to involve the judiciary. Camiel, 324 A.2d at 866.

Conclusion

We are asked to interfere with legislative process. As this Court has explained, [i]f there is any one principle of constitutional law which supports and protects our form of government, including all of our constitutional rights, it is separation of powers among the three branches of government. Every crack in this foundation weakens the entire structure.

Camiel, 324 A.2d at 866. When it comes to the legislature’s enforcement of its process, our Supreme Court has directed that “[a] proper respect for the limits of the judicial function and the doctrine of separation of powers dictates that we leave matters to the legislature.” Brandamore, 327 A.2d at 4. Consistent with Camiel and in respect of the separation of powers, we decline to exercise this Court’s equity jurisdiction to restrain enforcement of the Senate Committee’s subpoena in advance of confrontation. Judicial intervention at this juncture may only “needlessly disturb the compromises and working arrangements” of the political branches. Mazars, __ U.S. at __, 140 S.Ct. at 2031. Accordingly, the consolidated petitions for review challenging the subpoena duces tecum issued by the Senate Committee, and seeking declaratory and injunctive relief, are dismissed.
